Big Changes at RKA!

We're excited to share our big news! We've downsized RKA in order to free up more of our time and energy. Teaching kayaking is a big passion for us, and now we will be able to better balance this with our other big passion: conservation activism.

This next phase of our life and work will be dedicated to telling the stories of Canada's rainforest. Our mode of field research—kayak expeditions to the endangered wild places of the BC coast—is a unique, vivid and powerful way for us to bring ecological issues to the wider world. You can expect to see and hear more of us through our writing, documentary films and slide show tours.

RECOMMENDED:

THE LAST WILD WOLVES • IAN McALLISTER

During our 2006 trip to the Great Bear Rainforest we loaded our kayaks aboard Ian & Karen McAllister's trimaran and sailed into the heart of the wilderness to begin our 3-week expedition.

Ian's incredible stories and photos will transport you to a world where wolves feed on salmon alongside magnificent Grizzly and rare white Spirit bears. He touches on the human relationship with wolves across a variety of cultures, and shares the latest scientific findings on what makes these wolves unique.

Find The Last Wild Wolves, published by Greystone Books, at your favourite local book shop.

We'll continue to offer Leadership and Guide Training courses here in Tofino, and are proud to have partnered with Majestic Ocean Kayaking of Ucluelet BC in order to do this. Majestic will be handling course inquiries and registrations as well as outfitting our courses.

It is a bittersweet transition for us. We have fond memories of sharing many fantastic paddling days here in Clayoquot Sound, incredible wildlife encounters, stimulating conversations, loads of laughter, and long sunset walks. Thanks to all of you for enriching our lives over the past eight summers.

For grads of our Guide courses, we hope you will continue to spread the word about our fun-filled and adventurous programs. For all you recreational paddlers who plan to get further training with us, remember that our Leadership courses are designed with you in mind!

We are available for custom trips, but are already booked solid for 2008. Drop us a line if you'd like to set up a trip for 2009.

As we paddle into the next leg of our journey, we hope to stay engaged with you and your passion for wilderness. The support of our friends has always sustained us as we venture into uncharted territory. This winter we'll be busy with a lot of planning; in the spring we'll be updating you on our progress and letting you know what we need to get underway. So please keep in touch—we always love to hear from you!
